

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are employed in the service sector has increased from 1.2 billion to 2.2 billion, and the number of people in the manufacturing sector has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.5 billion (World Bank, 2000).

As a result of the increasing number of people employed in the service sector, the number of people who are employed in the manufacturing sector has decreased from 1.2 billion to 1.5 billion. This is because the service sector has become the dominant sector in the world economy, and the manufacturing sector has become the dominant sector in the service sector.

The increasing number of people employed in the service sector has led to a number of changes in the way that the service sector is organized and operated. These changes include:
